Case Scenario:

In an IT project team, Madhan, a seasoned software developer, consistently dismisses the ideas and suggestions put forth by his junior colleague, Leena. During team meetings and collaborative coding sessions, Madhan interrupts Leena, questions her competence openly, and rarely acknowledges her contributions. Leena has become hesitant to share her insights, and her morale has noticeably declined. This behavior is negatively impacting the overall team dynamic.

As a member of the IT project team, provide Madhan with recommendations on how to treat other colleagues.

Now the behavior Madhan is showcasing is a full compilation on how NOT to treat your colleagues.

Then the logical thing to do is to do the exact opposite.

1. "Consistently dismisses the ideas and suggestions":

Be open to all perspectives and opinions put forth by the colleagues so they can feel at ease that their voice is heard, and is not being spoken in vain. This allows for better ideas and unified environment.

2. "Interrupts Leena, questions her competence openly":

Do not criticize anyone directly. Remember no one is at fault, you are to criticize their work and not the person itself. Take full advantage, and make use of constructive feedback, assertive communication, and private one-on-one meetings to ensure your concerns are only heard to the person in question, and is being conveyed in the right manner.

3. "Rarely acknowledges her contributions":

Dish out ample amounts of acknowledgments even as small recognition to the people working with you. May it be an acknowledgment of their efforts or anything in their personal life. Make sure that they feel recognized for their work and bring in a sense of belonging.

How to foster a culture of respect that positively influences the team's productivity and collaboration?

In order to foster a culture of respect that positively influences the team's productivity, here are a few suggestions:

1. Make sure the people are free to speak out their mind.
2. Bring in a sense of belonging.
3. Ensure inclusiveness in the team in all aspects of work and culture.
4. Everyone must be open to feedback, and must follow assertive and constructive manner to get their point across to the other person.
5. Provide acknowledgment to the people and their efforts in performing a task.
6. Do not put age or designation as a priority, and choosing where to give respect and where not to.
7. Treat others in a respectful manner even if we are not getting the same treatment.
8. Be mindful of the words that you speak and the actions that you perform. This is to ensure that your words and actions doesn't offend others in team.
9. Be approachable.
10. Make sure to correct oneself, if a mistake is made.
